Obituary

The Hon. Sir Samuel Cooke

The second Chairman of the Law Commission of England and Wales, Sir Samuel Cooke, has died. Born in 1912, he was educated at Cambridge where he graduated with first-class honours both in the classical tripos and in the law tripos. He was President of the Cambridge Union Society in 1934. He was called to the Bar by Lincoln's Inn in 1936 and began a busy practice which took him to silk in 1960 and appointment as a judge of the High Court of Justice in 1967. He assumed office as Chairman of the Law Commission in 1973 and led it through an important time of transition. His friendly and scholarly personality made an impression on all who met him.

Mr. M. R. Penketh

The Chairman of the Interdepartmental Committee on Law Reform for the Capital Territory, Mr. M. R. Penketh, has died in Canberra aged 55. Born in Sydney and educated at Fort Street High School, he joined the then Department of the Interior in 1964. His position as Chairman of the A.C.T. Committee has been taken by Mr. A. S. Blunn.
