In its recent Issues Paper on The Contracting Out of Government Services the Council noted that the boundaries of private and public law were merging; the traditional view that administrative law applied only to public sector agencies had been challenged.

This collection of papers demonstrates that this blurring of public and private law is emerging in a number of jurisdictions in response to changes in service delivery and administration that are occurring in governments across the common law world.

The papers were presented at a conference held in Saskatoon, Canada, on 17-19 October 1996 under the auspices of the College of Law, University of Saskatchewan. With contributions from leading writers from Australia, Canada, New Zealand, the United Kingdom and the United States, this collection is a fascinating account of the ways in which legal systems in those countries have responded to the challenges of privatisation, contracting out, corporatisation and deregulation. It also provides an insight into the way those responses have differed from country to country on depending their constitutional and historical backgrounds.

The papers and their authors are listed below:

1. The Province of Administrative Law Determined?

Michael Taggart

2. Constitutionalism and the Contractualisation of Government

Murray Hunt
