

New magistrate

Daynor Trigg, SM

Daynor Trigg has been named as the Territory's newest stipendiary magistrate.

His appointment fills the vacancy left by Justice Sally Thomas after her appointment to the Bench.

Mr Trigg will take up his new position in December after finalising matters at William Forster Chambers.

Mr Trigg, 38, came to the Northern Territory in 1982 following five years of practise, two as a partner, with Povey Waterhouse and Basheer in Adelaide.

His practise was centred around civil litigation, personal injuries, criminal law, matrimonial, licensing, conveying and estate work.

He remained in Darwin for 18 months before moving to Melbourne to take up the position of Principal Legal Officer with the Special Prosecutor's Office (Commonwealth; now the DPP) where he headed, supervised and directed two task forces concentrated on tax evasion schemes.

In 1985 he returned to private practice in Adelaide, spent six months in 1986 with the Australian Government Solicitor's Office in Adelaide before resuming private practice.

He returned to Darwin in 1988 and has practiced as a barrister since that time.

Mr Trigg said he is delighted with the appointment and very much looking forward to the challenge of the law from a different perspective.

Mr Trigg and his wife, Marcia, have a son, Eric, aged nine months.
