FAREWELL MASTER LEFEVRE

Mr Phillip Lefevre who held the office of Master of the Supreme Court since 1985 retired as Master on 14 October 1993. He had previously held the office of Deputy Master for five years.

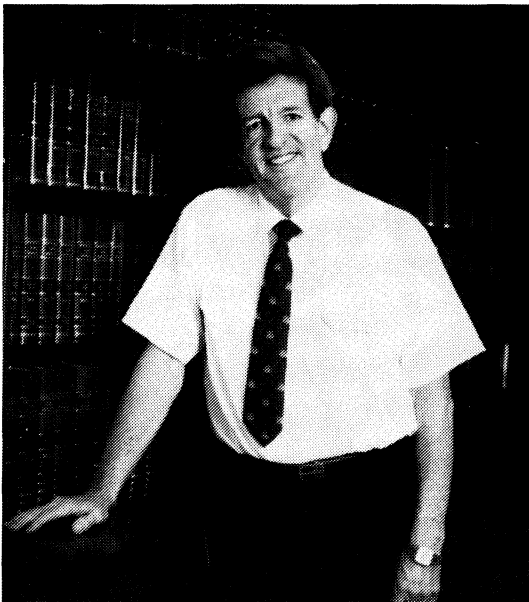

At a farewell function held on the balcony of the Supreme Court the President of the Law Society, Mr Neville Henwood, on behalf of the Society and members, presented Mr Lefevre with an aboriginal painting as a memento of his time in the Northern Territory. Mr Henwood thanked Mr Lefevre for his assistance to the legal profession over his many years of service in the Territory. In a note from Phil Lefevre on 23 October 1993 he said :-

"I very much appreciated your farewell to me and of the numbers of the profession who attended to wish me well. Thank you all for your kindness and generosity which have touched me. It's nice to know that I have been appreciated.

I hope that I will have the chance to see you all again some time. I leave Darwin with a lot of happy memories.

At anytime if any of you may be in our part of the world (22 Mitchell Parade, Mollymook) look us up. You will be welcome."

WELCOME MASTER COULEHAN

Mr Terry Coulehan, a member of the independent bar since 1983, took the oath of office as Master of the Supreme Court on 14 October 1993. Mr Coulehan, who was first admitted in Victoria in 1968, brings a wealth of experience in private practice to the position of Master of the Supreme Court. "Balance" will endeavour to interview Mr Coulehan for a future issue.
