

UH-OH

W e won't tell y o u which Mock Trial Magistrate was so nervous that he used the Ladies Room. What we can say is that Richard Bruxner was there and he saw it all.
Ask him. Perhaps someone should revise the so-called internationally recognised symbols;
they don't work.

OH, S_IT!

Following the armed hold-up of the Airport Hotel in Darwin a few weeks ago, the Police were serious about searching for the offender. During the search of the surrounding area, they were running through residential properties, armed, and happened to disturb a quiet get-together in a back yard where people were smoking a less than legal substance. Those at the social get-together were unaware of the robbery and thought they were being busted. One unfortunate fellow leapt into a cupboard in a laundry. Of course, the Police were SEARCHING and the cupboard was opened. The fellow seeking refuge had a gun levelled at him. As the story goes, it's a slow process, but he is regaining control of his bowel movements.

Most had very foggy memories: George Cridland couldn't remember going to a meeting; Richard Keller could only remember things which can't be printed, and; Penelope Holmes said we stirred memories "as muddy as man-grove swamps."

HAUNTED

ADULTERATION

Several women shared some champagne topped up with orange juice last month. Guess what they didn't know? It was Moët. Among the guilty were Elizabeth Morris, Tanya Fong Lim, Patricia Burrows, Kate Gillman, Tracy Marris, Meredith Day and Robyn Smith.

Redback has been reliably informed that there is a ghost lurking in the precincts of the Alice Springs Courthouse. No scoffing, please. Several people working alone in the building at night claim to have felt his presence. It is understood that this ghost emanates from the soul of a fellow who died whilst being held in the cells below.

FISHY KISS

Anyone wishing to know the intricacies of resuscitating dead -- or near dead -- fish should contact Lex Silvester Mildrens. The NT News claimed he tried, and failed, so had to keep the monster he caught in a recent fishing comp.

TRUE BLONDE

And who was the woman pulled over for speeding & ordered out of her car? She got out, left the car in gear & the hand brake off. The arresting officer had to pursue the car as it rolled off down the road. And, yes, she informed the officer, she was a natural blonde...

MEMORIES?

The Society contacted what founding Councillors of the Law Society it could find to ask for their comments or anecdotes on our 25th birthday.
