

Development Assistance Bureau changes name and wants recruits

The Australian International Development Assistance Bureau (AIDAB) has changed its name to Australian Agency for International Development (AusAID) and would like members to become involved in AusAID's program.

AusAID is an agency that manages Australia's overseas development assistance program.

The Northern Territory's AusAID office objectives are:

- * To promote the aid program throughout the Northern Territory community;

- * To create an awareness of AusAID's work in the immediate region;

- * To liaise with and inform the Territory's private enterprise, government and non-government organisations of the commercial opportunities occurring within the aid program that are relevant to the expertise and skills of the region.

AusAID welcomes any members who wish to participate in the program. For further information on AusAID and its programs call Brad Bowman on (089) 82 4105.

29th

Australian Legal Convention

Have you and your colleagues registered for the 29th Australian Legal Convention?

The Law Council of Australia is staging the 29th Australian Legal Convention in Brisbane's Convention and Exhibition Centre.

Starting on September 24, 1995, the convention will run for four days and will feature authoritative international and national speakers addressing current issues affecting the Australian legal profession.

Informative lunches, a range of social activities as well as concurrent business sessions have been organised.

As a program innovation, the committees and sections of the Law Council of Australia have contributed to more than 20 specialist business sections.

For full program and registration details contact Intermedia Convention and Event Management by phoning (07) 3369 0477.
