

Celebrating Law Week 2003

In case you hadn't heard yet, Law Week 2003 in the Northern Territory is looming large and the Law Society NT has planned a raft of functions and activities.

Kicking off the week will be the Chief Justice's XI vs the LSNT President's XI cricket match at Dinah Beach Oval on Sunday 11 May.

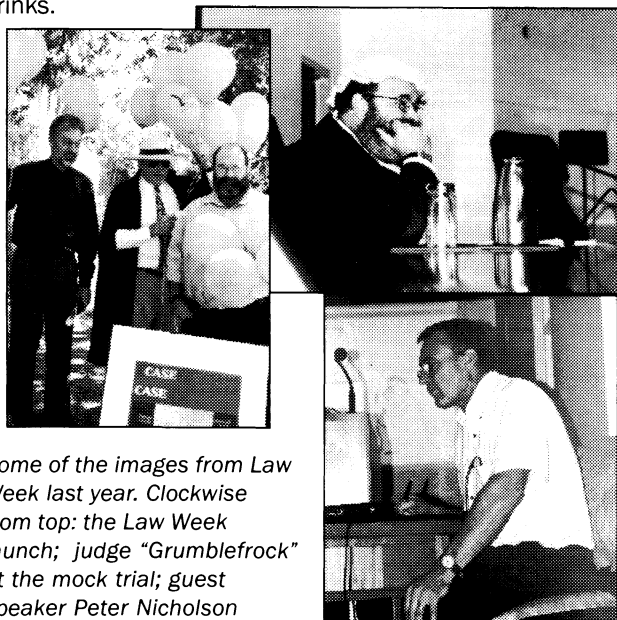

This classic clash has been revived as a Law Week event and promises to be a highly entertaining afternoon. As well, there will be a fundraising sausage sizzle to support NT School Sport representatives towards the end of the day. Everyone is welcome.

Our official launch on Monday 12 May will also incorporate the launch of Justice Trevor Riley's long-awaited publication The Little Red Book of Advocacy, a booklet of his well-read Balance Advocacy columns from 1999 to 2002.

Another highlight for the profession during the week will be the traditional Law Week lunches. Our guest speaker this year is Territory funny woman, Fiona O'Loughlin.

For ten years, Alice Springs-based Fiona has been honing her craft working as a corporate comedian, stand up comic and columnist. She has written and presented for ABC Radio, performed numerous television comedy spots including The Panel and successfully produced her own comedy festival shows in Australia, UK, USA and Canada.

Bookings for the lunches (in Darwin and Alice Springs on 14 and 16 May respectively) may be made through the Law Society NT on 89825104. The cost is $66 per head and includes a sumptuous meal as well as beer, wine and soft drinks.
