

Hidden rhyming talents at the DPP

Come one, Come all
to the Easter morning tea
held in the Moonta room
of the DPP

Hot Cross Buns and butter
chocolate eggs and toast
the murmur and the mutter
of prosecutors giving boast.

The Deputy Director
after five hot buns, no less regales the General Counsel
with his stories of success

But the General Counsel pauses
"you won't beat me old mate"
grabs several further hot cross buns
to join the four he's ate.

So lets all kick our heels up give a holler, don't be late
get stuck into the hot cross buns
before Jack & Michael clear the plate.

Hungry for lunch tickets

Some firms have been so keen to secure tickets to this year's Law Week lunch in Darwin, they started calling to try and make a booking two weeks before the invitations went out!

Footy tipping

The LSNT footy tipping competition is as competitive as ever this year.

Tips have been received from interstate hotels and phoned in from interstate. One punter was in such a hurry to make the Friday deadline, that they forgot to put their name on the tipping sheet - and then couldn't work out why they hadn't been credited with the correct amount of tips the following week.

Apology

MR would like to apologise to Danielle Loy. In the last edition, we announced that Danielle was moving to the Central Australian Womens Legal Service - not true. Danielle would like to assure her bosses that she is still working at CAALAS and has no intention of leaving.

Admissions

Congratulations to Kris Norrington from the NT Legal Aid Commission who was recently admitted to the Supreme Court role of legal practitioners.

Court calling

During a recent legal lunch in Alice Springs, one court staff member got caught out in a little white lie.

Court had been adjourned until 2.30pm. At about this time one practitioner received a telephone call from the Court informing her that the Magistrate was ready in their chambers waiting for her.

Unfortunately at that exact moment the Magistrate in question was at the same lunch quaffing white wine.
