

The Law Society farewells a high achiever

After six years as the regulatory officer of the Law Society Northern Territory, Josephine Stone AM is, “moving on to other things.”

The mother of two intends to spend more time in Brisbane with her daughter Madeline, who starts boarding school next year. She will divide her time between Brisbane and Darwin.

Mrs Stone was farewelled with a dinner with the Secretariat on her last day at the Society, 28 November.

Whilst Mrs Stone says she is looking forward to having time off work, she will keep busy with other commitments.

She has been appointed to the Federal ‘Regional Telecommunications Independent Review Committee,’ and is also involved in compiling a St Mary’s Primary School History book for their 2008 Centenary.

It’s been a big year for Mrs Stone, who was admitted as a Member of the Order of Australia in a private ceremony at Government House on 5 October 2007. The investiture was presided over by the then Administrator, His Honour, Mr Ted Egan AO, and was attended by a number of Mrs Stone’s family and friends. The honour, awarded for her contribution to the Northern Territory community in fundraising activities over 25 years, was announced on the Queen’s Birthday weekend earlier this year.

Josephine Stone AM

A high achieving family - Pam, Josephine and Shane Stone display their collective medals at Government House.

Are you getting updated on what’s happening in the local legal profession?

By now you may have received the new, improved Practitioner e-newsletter. If not, please let the Society know and we can add your email address to our mailing list. Contact lawsoc@lawsocnt.asn.au

Professional Standards & Ethics at the Law Society

Jacqueline Presbury is the new Professional Standards and Ethics Solicitor at the Law Society, replacing Josephine Stone.

Jacqueline will be with the Society full-time, and can be contacted at pss@lawsocnt.asn.au or on 8981 5104.