Indigenous protocols for lawyers: Second edition

The Law Society Northern Territory is proud to announce the launch of the second edition of Indigenous protocols for lawyers. The resource was released during a luncheon held at the Chifley Resort in Alice Springs on 12 May 2015.

While the first edition was launched over ten years ago in 2004, the protocols are still frequently utilised and adapted to suit other jurisdictions.

Effective cross-cultural communication skills are essential in law practice, especially in the Northern Territory; the second edition provides practical guidance and tips for practitioners representing Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander clients.

If you would like a copy of this free resource, please contact the Law Society Northern Territory.

Funding from the Law Society Public Purposes Trust is gratefully acknowledged.
