

Directory of Special Libraries Update

The Special Libraries Section is currently producing a new edition of the Directory of Special Libraries and questionnaires have been sent to all libraries the editors are aware of.

If you have not received a questionnaire, or know of a library who has not, please contact your State co-ordinator or the editors. (Listed below.)

We urge all Special Libraries to send in their forms without delay and hope to make this the most comprehensive directory yet.

Positions vacant

SENIOR RESEARCH FELLOW

Applications are invited from men and women graduates who have had a very wide variety of research experience but who do not really expect this to be taken fully into account when salary scales are being agreed.

The successful candidate will single-handedly be responsible for virtually every aspect of a major research project which is supposedly administered at the moment by a senior professor (now on part-time early retirement).

A small corner of an office is available for accommodation but most other provisions will be subject to protracted negotiations with a senile Head of Department.

During the course of the research the Fellow will be expected to prepare a series of articles based on the project for publication under the sole name of the senior professor.

The appointment is for exactly twenty-two (22) months and at the end of that time the Fellow will promptly (and quite frankly with no compunction whatsoever) be thrown out on the street.

TEMPORARY LECTURER

An extraordinarily well-qualified graduate with a fat list of publications and a full set of positively glowing references is required as a temporary lecturer to replace three recently retired full-time members of staff.

The successful candidate will find himself/herself stuck with a heavy load of backbreaking first year seminars and can count on being generally ignored if not actually snubbed by most tenured members of the department. He/she will be excluded from all decision making activities and within two years will be summarily dismissed for no good reason whatsoever. The university will then proceed to re-advertise the post.

The October issue of the ACOA Journal reprinted the items above which show that ACOA's difficulties in work organisation and classification practices are not unique! The InCite reader who sent them in assures us that these two job descriptions exactly fit many non-tenured positions being offered in library schools . . .
