

Australian Young Writers' Project

1985 has been declared International Youth Year by the United Nations and Australia is in the forefront of promoting the interests of youth; the Australian Young Writers' Project is intended to encourage their creativity.

The International Youth Year National Secretariat, Penguin Books Australia, The Literature Board of the Australia Council and the ABC have combined efforts to create a national award open to everyone under the age of 25 to write short stories, poems or scripts to become part of three separate media projects.

Penguin Books will publish a selection of successful entries as an anthology. ABC Radio will adapt successful submissions into radio plays. ABC Television will convert as many as five of the successful stories into half hour television dramas.

The three principal thrusts of IYY are participation, development and peace and it is loosely around these three themes that entries should be focused.

The Australian Young Writers' Project is the first major event of this nature to be launched for International Youth Year. It is hoped that it will form the basis for a continuing programme, the spirit of International Youth Year being seen as the beginning and not the end of such activities.

Details of the conditions of entry are available from Australian Young Writers' Project, at GPO Box 9994, Sydney NSW 2001, (02) 437 9111.

DLIS Retirement dinner

A great deal of thought and originality went into the design of invitations to the farewell dinner at the retirement of Andre Mali, Maxine Walker and Inge Zoll in May, each invitation having particular relevance to the individuals concerned.

Between them, the retiring librarians had 100 years of teaching experience, 31 of those years to the Department of Library and Information Services.

The occasion was very well attended and Don Watts, the Director of WAIT thanked the three librarians for their outstanding contribution to the profession.

FILMS AVAILABLE

The Sydney Filmmakers Co-op has added two short Australian narrative films, Stations and Devrim, to its collection. The Co-op houses Australia's largest collection of independently produced films and videos which it sells and hires to over 10,000 educational institutions, community groups, political organisations and government departments throughout Australia.

Stations, starring Noni Hazelhurst, is an award-winning film by Jackie McKimmie and one of the few films to show with a feature in a mainstream cinema, accompanying acclaimed Australian film Careful He Might Hear You during its season.

Devrim is about a young Turkish woman who finds herself in an impossible marriage. This film explores her dilemmas, her conditioning both as a migrant and as a woman, and looks at how she eventually deals with these. Devrim is told from a migrant woman's perspective having been written, produced and directed by the Migrant Women's Film Group and is the first film of its kind.
