

Electronic ordering

Initially on a trial basis, Queensland Institute of Technology is sending orders electronically to James Bennet Library Services.

They are using the Lynx database, Lion acquisition system and the downline loading software of IDAPS Australia.

Having searched the Lynx database for the required title and verifying the details, QIT orders electronically for the selected supplier.

James Bennett pick up the QIT orders from their electronic mail box and by loading them onto a diskette the orders can be entirely processed without the necessity for staff to verify or rekey.

Two videos

A new video on women in the workforce, You're there to do the job, has been produced to help women prepare for some of the difficulties they face when working in traditionally male work environments.

Turning 18 — is a documentary showing young people discussing the challenges they face as they become adults.

Both videos are distributed by Oceania Media Network Pty Ltd, GPO Box 1391, Sydney 2001.

Number six

The Albert Park Library in South Melbourne, Victoria has become the sixth Australian user of the Virginia Tech Library System (VTLS) and the seventieth user of the system worldwide. VTLS, a fully integrated local automation system, was officially installed at Albert Park in October, but had been operating there on a trial basis for several months.

Like other Australian public libraries using VTLS, Albert Park Library runs its systems on a machine it shares with the municipal government. The library has approximately 30,000 bibliographic records, houses 80,000 items, and serves 6,000 patrons.

Other VTLS users in Australia include The University of New England, Capricornia Institute of Advanced Education, Darling Downs Institute of Advanced Education, Cumberland College of Health Services and Campbelltown Public Library.

The Library Society, State Library of NSW, is calling for volunteers to photograph commercial and industrial buildings in their area. As these buildings are fast disappearing, the Society hopes the preservation project will keep some of this vanishing heritage on film for future generations.

Photos need to be black and white (with both photo and negative deposited with the Mitchell Library). For those with an itchy index finger who are interested in helping ease contact Rosemary Block, Library Society, State Library of NSW, Macquarie St, Sydney.
