Sirsi Corporation is proud to be sponsoring Library and Information Week in 2004

Sirsi recently announced a strategic plan for focusing talent and resources in Australia and the Asia-Pacific region. To ensure the company's continued industry leadership and worldwide expansion, Andrew Morrice was appointed the company's vice president of Asia-Pacific operations with the charge to concentrate on increasing Sirsi's leadership in the region. In addition to his role as vice president of Asia-Pacific operations, Morrice became managing director of Sirsi Australia. Morrice holds a bachelor of applied science in computing, a bachelor of business in marketing, and a master's degree in international business from Melbourne University.

Recent sales in the Asia-Pacific Region include the Australian Securities and Investment Commission, the body that enforces and regulates company and financial services laws to protect consumers, investors, and creditors; Pine Rivers Shire Library Service in Queensland; Catholic Education Department; Taipei Public Library in Taiwan; and Nanyang Technological University in Singapore.

In 2004, Sirsi Corporation (<http://www.sirsi.com>) celebrates twenty-five years as the strategic technology partner to more than 10 000 libraries around the world. A strong, growing company, Sirsi is dedicated to providing the library community with forward-thinking information technology solutions, including Sirsi Unicorn Library Management System, the first client/server-based and UNIX-based integrated library system; Sirsi iBistro and iLink, the first e-Library solutions with streaming enriched content; Sirsi Rooms, the first suite of context management solutions; and Sirsi Director's Station, the first information analysis tool for library executives.

New products introduced in 2004 include Sirsi Secured Resources Services, a first of its kind in the library technology industry, ensuring that Sirsi clients' highly valuable systems and information are safe and secure and that library users and staff will have uninterrupted access to mission-critical electronic resources; Sirsi Digital Community Center Kiosk, a study unit with a touch screen monitor that makes it possible for libraries to deliver information, resources, and services to people and places that might otherwise not have access to the physical library or to the internet from home or work; and Sirsi Digital Heritage Room powered by Sirsi Hyperion Digital Media Archive and Sirsi Rooms technologies, to provide libraries with an easy and cost-effective way to preserve images, documents and more, while making these materials more accessible to present and future generations of library users.

Other exciting Sirsi news involves a Sirsi client, the Stevens Institute of Technology located in Hoboken, New Jersey. It has become the first university in the United States to offer a hybrid master's degree to thirty-two graduate students enrolled in a Stevens' degree program in China. The masters in telecommunications management is offered to Chinese students in a two-tiered approach: online and conventional classrooms are supported at the Beijing Institute of Technology (BIT), one of China's top engineering universities.

Sirsi maintains operations in the United States, Canada, Mexico, Colombia, the United Kingdom, France, Spain, Denmark, the Netherlands, Saudi Arabia, Australia, China, and Singapore.
