

Parliamentary Library wins national innovation award

The Australian Parliamentary Library has won the 2005 Australian Government Libraries Information Network (AGLIN) National Innovation Award for its electronic media monitoring system (EMMS).

The independent panel of judges assessed the library's monitoring system as the most innovative, based on a set of criteria that included contribution to delivery of organisational outcomes in terms of core business, and the achievement of business capability improvements including dollars saved, organisation improvement, service improvement and customer satisfaction.

The EMMS allows federal parliamentarians to browse, search and view television and radio news and current affairs programs on their desktop PCs. The items are recorded in Canberra by Parliamentary Library staff and published on the EMMS website for access by Senators, Members and their staff both in Parliament House and in their electorate offices.

The system records 24 hours a day, 7 days a week, so that any items not scheduled to be automatically published to the website can be retrieved and published on request. In addition, the system captures closed captions for television items, allowing the text of items to be searched and retrieved.

The award was presented to the Parliamentary Library at the AGLIN conference dinner in Canberra on 12 July.

More information on the system is available at <http://conferences.alia.org.au/online2005/papers/b12.pdf>.

Professional development

Professional development (PD) is your strategy for success — lifelong learning that is unique to you. PD improves your ability to undertake your job and to keep pace with changing technology and knowledge in the dynamic environment of the library and information sector. You can tailor a learning program to suit your individual needs no matter whether you are working full-time or part-time, freelancing or temporarily out of the workforce.

ALIA PD services ... value for money
ALIA provides access to a broad range of training that is relevant to everyone working in the profession — with generous discounts for members. Please visit <http://alia.org.au/education/pd/> to view ALIA's comprehensive events, courses and conference program.

Remember to check the events calendar at <http://alia.org.au/events/> to find out what is happening in your region, state, nationally and internationally.

How do I join ALIA's PD scheme?

Personal Associate or Library Technician members of ALIA may elect to join the scheme at any time during a financial year. There is no fee for members, as it is a benefit of membership. To join, complete the online registration form (<http://alia.org.au/members-only/education/pd/register.html>) or contact the ALIA PD officer.

You are welcome to rejoin the scheme ...

Maybe your employment circumstances have changed or you were selected for a PD audit and found to be 'non-compliant' (you may have had a shortfall in points or did not provide your PD records); or you have 'withdrawn' from the scheme. If so, you are welcome to re-register.

To find out more, contact Jill Yvanovich by e-mail cpd@alia.org.au or phone 02 6215 8258. ■

Judith Washington OAM

ALIA congratulates Judith Washington who received a Medal of the Order of Australia in the Queen's Birthday honours list.

An ALIA member for 17 years, Judith received her award for service to librarianship, especially in the area of local history and archives, and to the community, through the conservation and preservation of local history material.

Judith was employed for 22 years as Lane Cove Council's manager of local history and archives and was responsible for initiating a local history monograph series, now numbering 18 titles. ■
