Show off your service: it's a vital link in the information chain

The 2007 theme for Library and Information Week (LIW) is 'Linking people with ideas @ your library'. Libraries link people with ideas every day. It's a vital part of our commitment to promoting the free flow of information and helping our clients achieve their goals. Use LIW to market and promote the tremendous contribution that your library or information service to educating, informing and entertaining all Australians. Our nation-wide week combines activities, events, competitions and presentations at national, state and local levels.

Posters and more

This year's LIW promotional materials include two colourful posters, bookmarks, balloons and wristbands. We are excited about a new product this year – book journals. These fabulous little book journals have delightful sayings about books and three sections in which to record books to read, books lent and books read. They are a handy size – 15 x 10.5cm – and would make wonderful gifts for clients and friends. These are all available now through our online shop or you can download an order form from <http://alia.org.au/liw>, fill it out and fax it to us!

Create your own eye-catching LIW promotional material – use our downloadable word documents, images and border file. There is also a new feature in the members-only section of the website: a downloadable A4 poster which you can personalise with your own text.

Special events

Don't forget to mark your calendar for National Library Technician's Day, celebrated every year on the Tuesday of Library and Information Week (22 May this year). For events in your area, check the LIW website.

Support the Cancer Council's annual Biggest Morning Tea with the Biggest Morning Tea @ your library to be held during LIW on Thursday 24 May 2007. Register via the LIW website.

Making it in the media

This year ALIA has three media releases for LIW, developed in conjunction with our sponsors Softlink, NetAlert and australia.gov.au (AGIMO – the Australian Government Information Management Office). These releases will be distributed nationally in media kits containing information about LIW 2007 and what libraries, and ALIA, are all about. Look for them and other media resources on the LIW website, where you can download them to supplement your own local media program.

It's a big week, made possible with the help of our sponsors, Softlink, NetAlert and australia.gov.au (AGIMO).

Be part of the powerful chain that links people with ideas during Library and Information Week!
