

Information Science is hands-on at ECU

ECU is a leader in information science research and teaching. Over the past two years, ECU staff and students have won industry excellence awards sponsored by ALIA and Google. All courses are available on-campus and online. What's more, commencing first year, full-time students may be eligible for a free Netbook computer. With flexible, multi-disciplinary graduate programs, the road to a career in information services is open.

For more details, call 134 ECU (134 328), email futurestudy@ecu.edu.au or visit our website.

I am seeking new horizons

RMIT's Master of Information Management will equip you with the latest technological and professional skills to provide effective and timely information services. You will be prepared to take on the biggest challenge facing organisations today – that of management of information. The Master of Information Management is accredited by ALIA and RIMPA. It is offered face-to-face, online or a combination of both.

ALIA ACCREDITATION: YOUR ASSURANCE OF QUALITY IN LIS EDUCATION

Welcome to our 2011 education lift-out. In these pages you will find all the library and information qualifications currently accredited by ALIA. And welcome too, to the official launch of the ALIA accreditation logo – our new user-friendly identification for currently accredited qualifications. Wherever you see this logo, you will know the course or program advertised has current accreditation from ALIA.

What is accreditation all about?

ALIA accredits courses at librarian and library technician level, typically every five years. Course accreditation is a critical element of the Association's responsibilities as the peak body for the profession and we work with education providers and other key stakeholders including students and employers to ensure the accreditation process identifies courses designed to equip graduates with the knowledge, skills and capabilities to enter the workforce and provide a high standard of information and service provision to their clients.

ALIA verifies qualifications for employers who are assessing job applications and also monitors library education globally in order to maintain important reciprocal recognition agreements with the Chartered Institute of Library and Information Professionals (UK), the American Library Association (ALA) and the Canadian Library Association (CLA).

Why have an accreditation logo?

Quality education has to evolve to meet the changing needs of the professions it serves. The accreditation process is focussed on ensuring the quality of the course and its relevance to current and emerging library and information practice. We are very proud to be able to offer all educators offering ALIA accredited courses the opportunity to use the new accreditation logo, ensuring prospective students and their future employers can be confident that these courses are designed to deliver relevant and effective training. And that these educators are as committed to the future of the profession as you are.

ALIA MEMBERSHIP – THE EMPLOYMENT EDGE

Eligibility for professional membership of ALIA can be a critical factor in a prospective employer's decision to give you the job you really want.

Graduates of an ALIA-accredited course, and who otherwise meet the requirements of ALIA membership, may be admitted to Associate (Librarian) or Library Technician membership automatically.

If you hold a non ALIA-accredited qualification or a qualification gained overseas it may be possible for you to become eligible for Associate or Library Technician membership through a widened eligibility or overseas assessment.

Further advice is available at:

www.alia.org.au/membership/benefits/personal.html

www.alia.org.au/education/overseas/qualifications.html

Use of the logo is voluntary, however, and the process of accreditation takes some time to complete – especially for new courses. So it's important to ask your prospective education supplier if they are accredited or working towards accreditation as part of your own assessment of courses for your needs. Or contact ALIA's education team for an update.

The accreditation logo can only be used on currently accredited courses and carries a date to ensure that currency. Educators wishing to use the logo can obtain the artwork and guidelines for use from ALIA – just email us at education@alia.org.au.

Full details for currently accredited courses are always available on the ALIA website at www.alia.org.au/education/qualifications.

MAKE YOUR TERTIARY STUDY COUNT

The ALIA Professional Development Scheme counts tertiary course study as a valuable professional development activity.

Tertiary courses are courses offered by universities, TAFEs or private registered training organisations (RTOs). For the purposes of the ALIA PD scheme you may claim single subjects or units of a course, or a complete course. For example, after your initial professional qualification, which gives you eligibility to join the ALIA PD Scheme, if you hold a library and information service Graduate Diploma and are now starting a Master or PhD, your course units count towards your ALIA PD. If you hold a relevant Diploma and undertake an undergraduate tertiary course in the field, this too can count towards your PD and your Certified Practitioner status. In fact, you can earn up to 30 PD points per subject per semester and up to 60 points per PD year. The only required proof for the PD audit is a certificate or a transcript. It can't get any easier than that.

Many institutions offer subjects or units on a one-off basis so you do not need to enroll in a whole degree or diploma to take advantage of these topics to add to your career profile. Post Graduate Certificates can also be used to broaden skills already gained in an undergraduate program, or develop vocational knowledge and skills in a new professional area. This form of study is also included in the PD activity group called Tertiary Courses.

If you have just enrolled in a second semester course - make it count, join the ALIA PD scheme now and become a Certified Practitioner by July 2012.
